“ So many stories with this great man.I did not get the chance to see all the fun things that Joe did in life,with the exception of his love of snowmobiling,classic cars and fireworks.But i did first had get to see the amount of detail that Joe put in every project he did.As his obit states ,he was not afraid to tackle any project.....which is where Joe and i mesh together.After a flooded basement a time or two Joe n Rita called me for assistance.Im not sure if the water was a direct cause by something Joe did,but suddenly he would not do plumbing...AT ALL!,,(lol).He put his confidence in me to take care of the plumbing in not just his home,but all of his neighbors at the lake..To now sit back and realize how much that means that he would put his name on my work brings me to tears...he had faith in me.Thank you Joe for being in my life and being a part of making me who i am today....Jonny5 p.s....Heart broke for your your best friend "pyro",,he will miss you greatly.

“ I remember when I told Joe I was going to nursing school. He told me, "You will be the brightest one in the class." When ever I start to doubt myself his words of wisdom keep me going. I will always keep your memories close to my heart.

“ Today my heart is heavy with the sad news of Joe's passing. I feel blessed to have known him as his caregiver and his friend. I will miss him. He was truly the funniest, kindest, and most thoughtful man I have known.

When I was taking care of Joe he told me he thought of me as his daughter. I told him I was honored he thought of me as his daughter. I remember one time I had my daughter with me and he told her to go find their new cat. She looked all over the house for that cat for almost 2 hours. She came back upstairs and told him she couldn't find it. Then he said if you find the litter box you will find the cat. Of course she couldn't find the litter box or the cat. After we got home Cassandra said, "You know mom I really don't think he has a cat." The next day Joe told her he didn't have a cat and we laughed.

In my heart I feel anyone who was graced with his presence was blessed to have known him. I will miss you.
