“ My dad was someone who was always willing to help others, but didn't want others to fuss over him. He was always about what was right and good. He was someone with a tough exterior but a heart of gold. I will miss him every day, but I know he is in a better place surrounded by love and one day I will see him again. Love you Dad

“ Randy was a man of few words but when he did speak you didn't have to guess how he felt. He told it like it was. Randy cared for many people in his life and he did that by showing them. The loves of his life were his daughters. I recently visited Randy a few times and he talked about the girls and he could not have been more proud of all three. He was so happy that the girls had found their mates for life. His grandchildren were the lights of his life. Randy had a big heart. When hospice told him he had entered the dying stage, even then he was thinking about his family. He said he did not want his passing to happen at a time that would ruin their Christmas. Randy wanted to visit Las Vegas, but that did not work out. I believe that he is in a place where the lights are more beautiful and brighter than Vegas could ever be. All his life Randy was a fighter for what he thought was right. This disease was just too big to fight. Jesus took his hand and now his new life begins. He was loved and will be greatly missed.

“ We will miss Randy so much. He was always so good to Mom, Dad, and our family. He felt more like an older brother, than cousin. Always looking out for us and helping us with anything we ever needed. He was like a son to Mom and Dad and I think he looked up to them like parents as well. Oh the hours he spend at our house drinking coffee, eating cookies, and sharing stories. May he rest in peace. Everyone is in our thoughts and prayers. Love to all.
